Wilbur L. Duncan, National President

Hello Everybody! Happy New Year to all the Alliance members, families and friends. We wish you a very healthy and happy 2016.

We are beginning the New Year with a slight increase in membership because you have been doing what our National Treasurer- Comptroller, Warren E. Powell has been saying every Thursday evening on the NAPFE Internet Radio Show – Each One, Reach One. You have been listening, to him and to our two Vice Presidents, Janice Robinson (1st) and Gale Thames (2nd) who have been talking to everyone within their hearing about the National Alliance of Postal and Federal Employees. As postal and federal employees, you may need someone to champion your cause at some time during your federal career. We are the Union that you want in your corner. Getting a raise is great, but to take advantage of that raise, you must be able to work at your assigned job. The National Alliance cares about all its members. If you haven't joined us yet, do so as soon as possible.

In another 30 days, our all new web site will be unveiled and you will be able to see what all we offer and sign up at that time - or if you want to talk to a live person, call us and we will be happy to talk to you.

The Alliance is about settled into their new headquarters and if you are in the vicinity, (Washington, DC) stop by and say hello. The NAPFE Credit Union is on the ground floor and is wheel-chair accessible.

As I said, 2016 is starting out as a great year in both membership and the effectiveness we are having in representing those members who have come to us for relief. We are doing it. Why not join us – Each one – Reach one. It's worth $100 to you. See page 4 for more information.

From the Desk of the National 1st Vice President

WEINGARTEN ERROR COST THE AGENCY

The Federal Labor Relations Authority (FLRA) denied the agency's exceptions to an arbitration award that reduced the grievant's 10-day suspension for various alleged infractions to an informal letter of warning.

The agency contended that the award was contrary to law because the arbitrator found that the agency violated the grievant's Weingarten rights despite the fact that the grievant was told that the meeting was for "safety concerns" and non-disciplinary. The FLRA stated that there were several factors that could have made the grievant fear discipline, supporting the arbitrator's conclusion that "the grievant felt threatened that discipline might be assessed at the meeting.

The agency suspended the grievant for 10 days on four charges. The stipulated issue at arbitration was whether the suspension was for just cause. The arbitrator determined that the agency violated the grievant's due-process rights: 1) the agency "didn't fairly or objectively investigate" the charge that was based on the grievant's allegedly unethical conversation with a contractor; 2) it refused to postpone a meeting between the grievant and upper-level supervisor until the grievant could obtain union representation, and in so doing violated the grievant's Weingarten right. Based on these agency missteps, the arbitrator concluded that the suspension wasn't for just cause. Finding the 10-day suspension excessive, the arbitrator ordered it replaced with an informal letter of warning.

The agency contended that the award was contrary to law because the arbitrator erroneously found that the agency violated the grievant's right to representation. The agency argued that the grievant could not reasonably have believed that discipline might result from the meeting, "because he was told that the meeting was for "Safety Concerns" and was non-disciplinary.

The FLRA stated that even assuming the agency told the grievant that the meeting was non-disciplinary, there were several factors that could have made the grievant fear discipline. These factors included: 1) the grievant's awareness of the agency's concern with his EEO activities; 2) the upper-level supervisor's visit to the grievant's worksite that day to discuss EEO policy; 3) the supervisor's specific reminder to the grievant about their meeting; and 4) the presence of three supervisors at the meeting, which surprised the grievant. Based on these factors, the arbitrator concluded that "there was no doubt that the grievant felt threatened that discipline might be assessed at the meeting."

The above scenario points out the fact - that the grievant, not the agency, is the one who determines if a meeting may lead to discipline. For further information pertaining to Weingarten rights, contact me.

ANSWERS FROM TEDDY THE TAX MAN

Teddy Prioleau is a registered representative, Enrolled Agent and the founder of Hunt Valley Retirements, LLC. You can reach him at 410-931-2004 or send an email to teddy@hvretirements.com. You can sign up for his monthly newsletter at www.hvretirements.com.

Q: I really, really am asking this for a friend. Her husband found out that in March, she changed her W-4 from claiming 0 allowances to claiming 9. In November, their tax advisor did a projection of the 2015 return, and it showed that instead of their 'normal' almost $1,000 refund, they'd be owing approximately $8,000. $8,000!!! When the advisor did a separate filing for each of them, it showed that she'd be owing $6,000 and he'd be getting a refund of less than $200. How can that be possible?

A: There are many answers and/or possibilities to your situation. Uh, I mean, your friend's situation. Maybe all the children are being claimed on hub-bub's return and not the wife's. Maybe there were educational credits that are allowed on the joint return and not on the separate returns. Maybe the alternative minimum tax is killing one or both spouses on the separate returns. I recommend that neither one of them claim 9 allowances in 2016. It's far too messy.

Q: I'm still going to call you so that you can help me roll over my TSP to an IRA. The reason I've been dragging my feet is that I can roll it over to my bank, or I can roll it over to my credit union. My cousin, whom I trust very much, said that for something like this, he didn't recommend either one of those entities. Although he explained and I understood, can I still hear YOUR thoughts?

A: Think about it. The institutions that you mentioned above, generally specialize in savings accounts, checking accounts and loans. AND THEY ARE GOOD AT IT! For the most part, they don't specialize in IRA's and other investments. I'm guessing that if you're trying to build your retirement future, you probably want someone who knows retirements and does it for a living. He/she can tell you what you need to watch for, when to move and can offer so many other nuggets to you for your retirement success, that I think at some point, you'll say that it was worth it.

Q: Once my 401k is rolled over to an IRA, how long do I have to wait to take a distribution?

A: The IRS doesn't have a minimum amount of time that the funds must remain in the IRA before a distribution is taken. It's up to the company to which the funds are being moved. I recommend checking with the new company or the advisor who's helping you, so that you'll know in advance.

Famous Quotes

"There comes a time when one must take a position that is neither safe, nor politic, nor popular, but he must take it because conscience tells him it is right."

"Change does not roll in on the wheels of inevitability, but comes through continuous struggle."

The above reminds one of an organization that has struggled to survive for more than 100 years and the struggle goeth on.
